

Experience NOVA SCOTIA

Experience Nova Scotia a stunning photographic series about Nova Scotia that showcases the beauty of this Atlantic province, and shows you some of the best experiences that can be found here. A husband and wife team travel around Canada's Ocean Playground to reveal amazing experiences to be had, from the world-class Keltic Lodge Resort at one end, to a whale watching paradise at the other end.

Filmed on RED digital cinema camera, this 6 x 30 min. episode 4K (UHD) series is perfect for travellers looking for an amazing bucket list destination. Password protected screeners available on request.

PEGGY'S COVE

CABOT TRAIL

WHALE WATCHING

BRIER ISLAND

TATAMAGOUCHE

FUNDY SHORE

Peggy's Cove and Kejimikujik National Park

What do Peggy's Cove and Kejimikujik National Park have in common? One is on the coast, the other in the province's interior, both are amazing places to explore during daylight hours and both are areas in which to view the Milky Way! This remarkable night sky sight never grows old and often takes a viewer's breath away. We are not only going to check these areas out, we are going to shoot a few time lapses!

Cape Breton Highlands

The Cabot Trail is world-renowned for travelling through the stunning beauty of the Cape Breton Highlands. Every twist and turn of this highway is another amazing view. We spend time at the jewel of the Highlands, the fabulous Keltic Lodge, spend some time visiting beaches, lookoffs, restaurants and cap it off with a hike along the Skyline Trail.

Whale watching on Brier Island

This small island at the end of Digby Neck is a photographer's and nature lover's heaven. Brier Island marks the beginning of the Bay of Fundy. The Bay of Fundy is not only the home of the world's highest tides, it is also the summer feeding ground and nursery for many whale species, all of which have to pass by the island, making this a perfect place to watch whales!

The Island of Brier Island

The village of Westport is an active fishing village, picturesque, friendly, full of history and charm. Hiking trails around the island take us along basalt cliffs and through bogs that are home to a flower so rare that this island is one of only two places in the world that it calls home. We spend time exploring this amazing island, and we talk to a photojournalist who spends time on the island giving nature tours, a scientist who explains how a little yellow flower is resulting in important changes to the wetlands and the island, and a local musician who grew up on this island, worked as a fisherman and sings of the life and people here.

Tatamagouche

Defying the trend of small towns and villages struggling to keep up with modern times, Tatamagouche is prospering. We meet some of the people responsible for the growth of this small community. Beer, chocolate and trains are among the highlights of a visit to this area.

Fundy Shore

The Bay of Fundy has the highest tides in the world, and the highest of these have been measured at Burntcoat Head. We visit here during low tide, allowing us to walk on the ocean floor! The rich tidal flats of the bay have become an important fueling stop for birds migrating from their summer homes in the sub-arctic to their winter homes as far south as South America. Our visit to this area is timed perfectly for checking out one of the beaches on which these migrants stop to fatten up. We meet up with a woman who met her true love in Nova Scotia and some people responsible for the burgeoning wine industry in the province. Yes, Nova Scotia now has a wine route!